ORDER

 8 On February 4, 2008 Joshua Hedlund entered a plea of 9 guilty to one count of the Use of Property for the Purposes of 10 Manufacturing Marijuana in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 856(a)(1), 11 and to one count of Money Laundering in violation of 18 U.S.C.
 12 § 1956(a)(1)(A)(i). In the Plea Agreement, Hedlund admitted 13 that from mid-2003 to March 2006 he had allowed others to use
 14 the warehouse at 809 Allston Way in Berkeley to cultivate 15 marijuana. He also admitted that in February 2004 he had 16 received money, which was the proceeds of the marijuana 17 cultivation, and had deposited a portion of this money, 18 $1947.42, into a Bank of America account as a mortgage payment 19 on the warehouse. He is now before the Court for sentencing on 20 these convictions. On June 2, 2008 the U.S. Supreme Court
 21 decided United States v. Santos, __ U.S. __, 128 S. Ct. 2020
 22 (2008) which raises a question as to whether the conduct 23 underlying the money laundering count continues to be unlawful.
 24 Following the decision the Court ordered the parties to submit 25 briefs on the impact of Santos on this proceeding. That has 26 been done and the parties have argued the matter before the 27 Court. At the hearing the Court stated that, as a result of 28 the Santos decision, the plea of guilty to the money laundering

1 charge must be vacated. This order memorializes and explains 2 that decision.

3 I. THE SANTOS DECISION

4 The defendant argues that after Santos the money 5 laundering count must be dismissed, as the factual basis for 6 his plea does not establish that the financial transaction, 7 underlying the money laundering violation, involved "proceeds"
8 which were "profits." The Money Laundering statute, 18 U.S.C.
9 § 1956(a)(1)(A)(i), prohibits the conduct of a financial 10 transaction involving the "proceeds" of a specified unlawful 11 activity (SUA). The unlawful activities covered in the statute 12 are listed at § 1956(c)(7) and included the marijuana 13 cultivation offense charged in this indictment.

14 The defendant in Santos had been convicted in the Northern 15 District of Indiana of money laundering in violation of 16 § 1956(a)(1)(A)(i), by making payments to winning bettors, 17 taking commissions from bets made, and paying the salaries of 18 bet collectors as part of an illegal gambling enterprise.
19 Santos, 128 S. Ct. at 2022-23. That conviction was affirmed on 20 direct appeal, but was set aside on collateral attack under 28 21 U.S.C. § 2255 on the basis of a subsequent decision of the 22 Seventh Circuit in United States v. Scialabba, 282 F.3d 475
23 (2002). Santos, 128 S. Ct. at 2023. In Scialabba the Seventh 24 Circuit found that the term "proceeds" in § 1956(a)(1)(A)(i)
25 applies only to criminal profits and not to criminal gross
26 receipts. Scialabba, 282 F.3d at 478. The District Court
27 hearing Santos' § 2255 Petition found that there was no
28

1 evidence that the payments made by him (to winners, runners, 2 and collectors) came from profits as opposed to gross receipts, 3 and reversed the convictions. Santos, 128 S. Ct. at 2023. The 4 Seventh Circuit affirmed this decision and the U.S. Supreme 5 Court decision in Santos affirms the Seventh Circuit. Id.

6 There is no majority opinion in Santos. There are two 7 four Justice opinions, one authored by Justice Scalia and the 8 other by Justice Alito, reaching opposite conclusions. Justice 9 Stevens' concurrence with the opinion by Justice Scalia makes 10 that opinion the plurality and the Justice Alito opinion the 11 dissent.

12
13 A. PLURALITY

14 Justice Scalia explains that the money laundering statute, 15 § 1956(a)(1)(A)(i), uses the term "proceeds" but does not 16 define it. Santos, 128 S. Ct. at 2024 (plurality opinion). He 17 further explains that this term can mean either "profits" or 18 "receipts". Id. After considering the context in which the 19 statute was enacted, Justice Scalia concludes that the term is 20 ambiguous and that the venerable rule of lenity for criminal 21 laws requires that in such circumstances the term must be 22 interpreted in favor of the defendant. Id. at 2024-25. He 23 then concludes that inasmuch as the "profits" definition of 24 "proceeds" will always be more defendant-friendly than the 25 "receipts" definition, that the rule of lenity dictates that 26 this definition should be adopted. Id. at 2025.

1     B.     DISSENT

2             Justice Alito concedes that "proceeds" can mean either 3     "net profit" or "the total amount brought in," but also finds 4     that in such circumstances the Court is required to ask what 5     the term "proceeds" means in the relevant context--use in a 6     money laundering statute. Id. at 2035 (Alito, J., dissenting).
7     Upon review of that context he concludes that the term is not 8     ambiguous, that the rule of lenity need not be invoked, and 9     that the term "proceeds" as used in § 1956(a)(1)(A)(i) is not 10    limited to "profits." Id. at 2036.

11
12    C.     CONCURRENCE

13            As already noted, Justice Stevens concurs in the judgment 14    reached by Justice Scalia, with the result that the Seventh 15    Circuit decision is affirmed and the money laundering
16    conviction of defendant Santos is reversed. As a general rule 17    on decisions such as this the stare decisis effect is 18    determined by limiting the holding of the Court to the narrower 19    ground stated in the concurring opinion. See Marks v. U.S., 20    430 U.S. 188 (1978). It is necessary, then, to examine Justice 21    Stevens' opinion with a sort of heightened scrutiny to see what 22    narrow ground was agreed upon, or, if in fact there was any 23    agreement at all.

24
25            1.     Legislative History

26            Money laundering offenses involve the use of the 27    "proceeds" of "specified unlawful activity" (SUA). All told 28

1 there are approximately 250 of such predicate offense SUAs.
2 See 18 U.S.C. § 1956(c)(7). Justice Stevens finds that there 3 is simply a lack of any legislative history speaking to the 4 definition of "proceeds" when the SUA is the conduct of 5 unlawful gambling. Santos, 128 S. Ct. at 2032 (Stevens, J., 6 concurring). On the other hand, he agrees with Justice Alito 7 that the legislative history makes it clear that "proceeds" 8 includes all gross receipts when the SUA involves "the sale of 9 contraband and the operation of organized crime syndicates
10 involving such sales." Id. Justice Stevens finds that "... I 11 cannot agree with the plurality that the rule of lenity must 12 apply to the definition of "proceeds" for these types of 13 unlawful activities." Id. at 2032 n.3. It seems clear to this 14 Court that the contraband sales type of SUA described by 15 Justice Stevens would include all offenses related to drug 16 trafficking, including the marijuana cultivation offense
17 defendant Hedlund has pleaded guilty to. In its Santos
18 decision, then, five of the Justices have opined that Congress 19 intended to include the gross receipts from drug trafficking 20 offenses in the term "proceeds." Id. at 2029, 2032.

21 2. Merger

22 There is a good deal of discussion in Santos about a 23 "merger problem." Id. at 2026-27. The problem lies in the 24 fact that it is often the case that the same underlying conduct 25 can constitute an offense under both the substantive SUA 26 offense involved and the money laundering statute. Id. For 27 example, when Santos paid off a bettor, that payment violated
28

1 both the gambling statute and the money laundering statute.
2 Id. at 2026. The real problem is not this definitional
3 overlap, but that the penalties provided are frequently 4 significantly different. Id. at 2031-32. In the Santos case, 5 as an example, the statutory maximum is five years for the 6 gambling offense and 20 years for the money laundering offense.
7 Id. In fact Santos was sentenced to 60 months for the gambling 8 offense and to 210 months for the money laundering offense even 9 though the underlying conduct could support a conviction under 10 either statute. Id. at 2023. This unexplained radical 11 increase in punishment for the same underlying conduct that is 12 embodied in both the substantive offense and in the 13 subsequently enacted money laundering statute, and the arguably 14 excessive grant of prosecutorial discretion that it entails, 15 appears to disturb all the Justices, as it certainly did 16 Justice Stevens. Justice Stevens opines that the consequence 17 of applying a "gross receipts" definition to Santos' gambling 18 operation is "so perverse" that in his opinion it could not 19 have been contemplated by Congress. Id. at 2032 (Stevens, J., 20 concurring). On the other hand, Justice Stevens states that in 21 a different circumstance where the application of the statute 22 does not involve such a "perverse" result he would presume the 23 legislative history described by Justice Alito would reflect a 24 different Congressional intent. Id. In Hedlund's case, the 25 penalties for the marijuana offense and the money laundering 26 offense are not substantially different. This seems to support 27 an arguable conclusion that Justice Stevens' opinion can be 28

1 said to hold that "proceeds" includes "gross receipts" in the 2 money laundering offense committed by Hedlund. Cf id.

3 3. Stare Decisis

4 Justice Scalia undertakes to describe the stare decisis 5 effect of Justice Stevens' opinion as limiting the holding of 6 the judgment entered to the narrow ground that "proceeds" means 7 "profits" when there is no legislative history to the contrary.
8 Santos, 128 S. Ct. at 2031 (plurality opinion). Justice
9 Stevens says, "That is not correct." Id. at 2034 n.7 (Stevens, 10 J., concurring). Justice Stevens describes the grounds of his 11 decision as including the lack of legislative history and his 12 conclusion that Congress could not have intended the "perverse" 13 result caused by the "merger problem" that is produced by 14 Justice Alito's opinion. Id. He concludes that when both 15 circumstances are considered, the rule of lenity may be of 16 weight; that the plurality opinion is persuasive; and that he 17 concurs in its judgment. Id. at 2034.

18 4. Clark v. Martinez

19 The result of Justice Stevens' opinion is that the term 20 "proceeds" in § 1956(a)(1)(A)(i) has different meanings for 21 different predicate SUAs. Id. at 2031-32. In gambling cases 22 it means "profits", in drug trafficking cases it means 23 "receipts." Id. He acknowledges this result in his statement 24 that, "... (it is) my view that "proceeds" need not be given 25 the same definition when applied to each of the numerous 26 specified unlawful activities that produce unclean money." Id.
27 at 2034 n.7. Justice Scalia emphatically disagrees with this thesis. Id. at 2030 (plurality opinion). He describes Justice Stevens' position as "original with him," as an "interpretive contortion," and that, "it has no precedent in our cases." Id. Justice Scalia points out that just three years ago the Supreme Court held in its Clark v. Martinez decision that "the meaning of words in a statute cannot change with the statute's application." Id. In his Santos opinion Justice Scalia writes:

"Clark v. Martinez, 543 U.S. 371, 125 S. Ct. 716, 160 L.Ed.2d 734 (2005), held that the meaning of words in a statute cannot change with the statute's application. See id., at 378, 125 S. Ct. 716. To hold otherwise "would render every statute a chameleon," id., at 382, 125 S. Ct. 716, and "would establish within our jurisprudence ... the dangerous principle that judges can give the same statutory text different meanings in different cases," id., at 386, 125 S. Ct. 716. Precisely to avoid that result, our cases often "give a Statute's ambiguous language a limiting construction called for by one of the statute's applications, even though other of the statute's applications, standing alone, would not support the same limitation. The lowest common denominator, as it were, must govern." Id., at 380, 125 S. Ct. 716 (emphasis added).

Id.

In Clark v. Martinez the Supreme Court considered the interpretation of the words "may be detained" in 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(6), a statute dealing with alien detention. 543 U.S. at 378. By its terms the statute covers three categories of aliens:

1. Those who are inadmissible under 8 USC §1182
2. Those who are admissible but removable under 8 USC §1227(a)
3. Those found to be flight or community risks.

Id. at 377.

1 In a case decided before Clark v. Martinez, Zadvydas v.
2 Davis, 533 U.S. 678 (2002), the Supreme Court found that, as to 3 the aliens in category 2, the words of the statute did not mean 4 indefinite periods of detention but rather a period of 5 detention limited to the time "reasonably necessary" to carry 6 out removal. Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 689. In Clark v. Martinez
7 the alien had come to the United States in the Mariel boat 8 lift, had committed violent felonies, and was an inadmissible 9 alien as defined by category 1. 543 U.S. at 374-75.

10 The Supreme Court found that the Zadvydas interpretation 11 of the statute must be applied to Martinez, finding that the 12 same interpretation of the words of the statute must apply to 13 both categories of aliens. Id. at 378.

14 Justice Alito in Santos also disagrees with Justice 15 Stevens, stating "... and contrary to the approach taken by 16 Justice Stevens, I do not see how the meaning of the term
17 "proceeds" can vary depending on the nature of the illegal
18 activity that produced the laundered funds." Santos, 128 S.
19 Ct. at 2044 (Alito, J., dissenting).

20 Justice Stevens concurred in Clark v. Martinez, but opines 21 that it can be distinguished from the Santos case, arguing, 22 "... in Martinez there was no compelling reason -- in stark
23 contrast to the situation here -- to believe that Congress 24 intended the result for which the Government argued." Santos, 25 128 S. Ct. at 2034 n.7 (Stevens, J., concurring). This 26 argument--that the penalty for money laundering, when the SUA 27 is a gambling offense, is so perverse that it compels one to 28

1 reason that Congress did not intend the word "proceeds" to 2 include all "receipts" derived from this offense--was not 3 joined by any other Justice. See id. at 2021.

4 In his discussion about stare decisis, Justice Scalia 5 observes:

6 ... Counsel remain free to argue Justice Stevens'
7 view (and to explain why it does not overrule Clark 8 v. Martinez, supra.) They should be warned, however, 9 not only do the Justices joining this opinion reject these views, but so also (apparently) do the Justices joining the principal dissent.

10 Id. at 2031 (plurality opinion).

11 II. DISCUSSION

12 The conviction of defendant Santos was vacated by the 13 District Court hearing his § 2255 collateral attack, because 14 there was no evidence that the transactions on which the money 15 laundering convictions were based involved profits, as opposed 16 to receipts, of the illegal activity. In the case before the 17 Court, the factual basis for the money laundering conviction is 18 that Hedlund used a portion of the proceeds from the marijuana 19 grow to make a mortgage payment on the building used to grow
20 the marijuana. Under any accounting system such a mortgage 21 payment is a business expense, it is not a part of the profits
22 of the business. If the Santos rule -- that the word 23 "proceeds" in 18 U.S.C. § 1956(a)(1)(A)(i) is limited to the 24 profits of the illegal activity -- applies to the Hedlund case, 25 then the financial transaction in Hedlund does not involve the 26
27
28

1 profits of the illegal activity and the money laundering
2 conviction must be vacated.

3 The government argues that the Santos rule applies only 4 where the predicate SUA is a gambling offense. The argument 5 asserts that there is no single rationale which explains the 6 Santos result. The rationale of the plurality -- that the word 7 "proceeds" in the statute must mean profits -- is inconsistent 8 with the rationale of the concurring opinion -- that the words 9 can have different meanings as applied to different SUAs. The 10 government then argues that in such cases the Marks rule 11 (supra) cannot be applied, as there is no common denominator 12 for the Court's reasoning, and that, "[i]n such a case . . .
13 the only binding aspect of a splintered decision is its 14 specific result," citing Anker Energy Corp. v. Consol. Coal 15 Co., 177 F.3d 161 (3d Cir. 1999). The government then finally 16 argues that the specific result of Santos is that "proceeds"
17 means "net profits" only where the underlying SUA is illegal 18 gambling, with the further result that, consistent with the 19 view of five of the Justices, in a case involving contraband 20 (such as drugs) sales, "proceeds" should be read to mean "gross 21 receipts."

22 This Court cannot accept the government's argument. It 23 does not confront Clark v. Martinez, and its consideration in 24 Santos. The government appears to be correct that Santos does 25 not have a common denominator and that the Court should view 26 its stare decisis effect as limited to the specific result.
27 And the government is correct that five of the Justices said
28

1 that Congress intended that "proceeds" should mean "gross 2 receipts" in drug trafficking cases. But the bottom line is 3 that five Justices said that, but they did not vote that. The 4 specific result of Santos is that five Justices voted that 5 "proceeds" means "profits" in 18 U.S.C. § 1956(a)(1)(A)(i).
6 This decision came about in a case where the SUA was gambling,
7 but the Supreme Court did not hold that their decision applied
8 "only" to gambling cases. To the contrary, Justice Scalia made 9 it very clear that this decision was not to be read as 10 permitting the word "proceeds" to be given different meanings
11 for different applications of the statute. Justice Scalia's 12 discussion of Clark v. Martinez cannot be read in any other 13 way. Justice Alito agreed with this position, specifically 14 stating that he did not "see how the meaning of the term
15 'proceeds' can vary depending on the nature of the illegal
16 activity that produced the laundered funds." Santos, 128 S.
17 Ct. at 2044 (Alito, J., dissenting). There is an interesting 18 subtext in this issue. Justice Thomas, a member of the 19 plurality, declined to join Part IV of the Santos plurality 20 opinion. Part IV is the part that includes the entire 21 discussion of the Clark v. Martinez issue. Justice Thomas 22 dissented in Clark v. Martinez. It appears to this Court that 23 he is declining to join Part IV in Santos because he is 24 maintaining his dissent in Clark v. Martinez, with the further 25 unstated premise that seven of the Justices believe that Clark
26 v. Martinez is still good law. In any event, it is beyond 27 doubt that Clark v. Martinez is not reversed by Santos.

1           The result of this analysis is that this Court believes 2           that the Supreme Court in Santos has held that the word 3           "proceeds" in 18 U.S.C. § 1956(a)(1)(A)(I) means "profits," and 4           that Clark v. Martinez requires that this meaning must apply to 5           every SUA listed in the statute. The further result is that 6           the money laundering conviction of defendant Hedlund must be 7           set aside.
